JUDGE RAIDS TWO SALOONS TO HELP THE BINGHAM BILL

Magistrate Whitman's Action Said to Have Followed a Dinner at Which He and the Police Commissioner Were Present.

BOTH THE RAIDED PLACES ARE IN WALSH'S DISTRICT.

The Inspector Has Been Especially Active in Opposition to the Bingham Bill—Prisoners Arraigned and Held in $500 Bail Each.

A raid made last night by Charles S. Whitman, President of the Board of City Magistrates, upon two saloons in the West Forty-seventh Street Precinct is believed to have been instigated by Commissioner Bingham for the purpose of helping the passage of the Bingham bill in the Senate at Albany next Tuesday.

Inspector Richard Walsh is in charge of the district comprising the West Forty-seventh Street Precinct. He is one of the inspectors that went to Albany to oppose the Bingham bill, and Commissioner Bingham is particularly sore at him.

Capt. John Daly is in charge of the West Forty-seventh Street Precinct. At the raid there were pretty strong accusations that he was getting protection money from saloons made by Magistrate Whitman last night, these charges were not repeated today. Reports from Police Headquarters say that Daly will pass the fact that nearly every saloon in his precinct was running after hours last night up to Inspector Walsh, and that this will be cited by Commissioner Bingham in order to force the passage of the bill.

Held Court in Station House. Both Magistrate Whitman and Commissioner Bingham are secretive to day about the events leading up to the sensational happenings of last night, when the Magistrate accompanied a round-up of saloon keepers to the station house, held the men arrested in $500 bail and refused to accept the bondsmen they offered. From all accounts it seems that Commissioner Bingham, Magistrate Whitman and others met at dinner in a hotel in the West Forty-seventh Street Precinct.

The dinner lasted until long after midnight. A few minutes after 1 o'clock Magistrate Whitman left. It is said that he rode away in Commissioner Bingham's automobile, but the Commissioner would not affirm that today.

At 12:30 o'clock Magistrate Whitman, in evening clothes, stepped into McQuillan's bar, at Forty-ninth Street and Sixth Avenue. There were four or five men standing against the bar. The front door was open. Magistrate Whitman bought a drink of whiskey and paid for it.

"How do you manage to keep open after hours?" he asked the man behind the bar, who appeared to be the proprietor. "Oh," replied the individual addressed, "I own this precinct."

The Second Raid. Magistrate Whitman, next appeared in the saloon at the southeast corner of Forty-seventh Street and Eighth Avenue, half a block from the station house. The side door was open. Half a dozen women and four or five men were in the back room. The door to the bar was open and beer and whiskey were being passed through a slide in the partition. Magistrate Whitman stepped up to the slide, bought a drink of whiskey, paid for it and asked the man behind the bar if he knew it was after hours.

"The Captain of this precinct," replied the bartender, "is a good fellow."

Then the Magistrate hurried over to the station house and ordered the arrests. He told the reporters on the station house steps, after he had seen the prisoners locked up, that he knew the Captain was collecting graft. This is the first time that the Magistrate has been known to be so obedient to his superior officers. It is said that Inspector Bingham is in possession of information that Capt. Daly has complained that he is not allowed to do his duty. His precinct is about the liveliest in the city.

Appears Against Prisoners. In the West Side Police Court today Magistrate Whitman appeared personally against the two prisoners, James McQuillan, of the Sixth Avenue place, and John McGarry, of the Eighth Avenue place. He personally superintended the arrangements for the examination. Both defendants waived examination and were held in $500 bail. Jack Dunne, the proprietor of Jack's restaurant, furnished the bond for McQuillan. He is a getting street, declared the Magistrate, bringing evidence before me without sufficient cause. I want out last night and showed them how easy it is to get evidence. I also established that the restaurant is more widely known than ever.

Don't blame the policeman. One of the saloon keepers told McGarry that he had orders to let McGarry out last night.

HORSES AT BENNING IN FINAL TRIALS FOR FIRST BIG HANDICAP

Graziallo, Miller's Mount, Gold Sifter and Others in Monday's Races on Edge for the Season's Opening.

BY FRANK W. THORP.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The best work of the day at Benning was that of Hezeca 11, with Radtke in the saddle. This Carter Handicap candidate broke at the three-quarter pole and worked around to the stand in a shade better than 1:15. Some watches made the work as good as 1:17 2-5, but 1:15 is nearer correct. Six furlongs in 1:15 does not look much on paper, but the track here is very slow and heavy and Horace E was a bit in hand all the way, so that he showed a cracking good performance.

Graziallo, the Garth candidate for the Benning Handicap on the opening day, worked seven furlongs in 2:1 2-5 and did something left at the end. This was a snatching good work, and as Miller rides Graziallo in the big run, Graziallo will come close to being post favorite.

AT A 50-MILE GAIT WEST HAS IT THAT NELSON IS TO QUIT NOLAN.

Pinned Underneath, the Owner, Probably, Is Fatally Injured.

In attempting to swing a big touring car, running fifty miles an hour, which he was steering from Force Tube avenue into Jamaica avenue, on the outskirts of Brooklyn, to-day William V. Stuckey, of No. 104 West Fifteenth Street, ran the machine down an embankment and sustained possibly fatal injuries in the wreck. Walter Boyd, of No. 220 Decatur street, Brooklyn, who was riding in the tonneau, escaped serious injury.

Stuckey, who is twenty-one years old, and Boyd, who is twenty, are students at the Stevens Institute in Hoboken. Stuckey recently purchased a forty-horsepower touring car. He invited Boyd to take a tour of Long Island with him to-day and called for him at his home in Decatur street.

They started out to get to the Merrick road by way of Highland avenue. Force Tube avenue and Jamaica avenue would try to make the turn.

Stuckey, it appears, was turning from Highland avenue into Force Tube avenue, according to eyewitnesses, he did not slacken speed, although there is a steep grade in the latter thoroughfare leading down to Jamaica avenue. As the latter thoroughfare was approached eyewitnesses say the machine was running fully fifty miles an hour. None of them expected that the young chauffeur would try to make the turn.

Jamaica avenue is banked up at that point. Young Stuckey tried to swing the machine around. It skidded and shot sideways into a hole 20 feet deep, turning halfway over.

Boyd, who landed with the wheels on the ground, was pinned in by the steering gear, was held under the heavy machine.

Policeman Meehan, who saw the accident, summoned assistance and got the automobile off Stuckey. He was unconscious. Boyd, wounded but unhurt, gave the name of the injured man, and he was removed to Bradford Street Hospital.

Stuckey, who had his left leg broken, had suffered many lacerations, and that there were traces of severe internal injuries.

It is expected a landing will be made this evening in New Jersey between Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

Counsel for the Prisoner Declare in Affidavits that He Is Perfectly Able to Advise with Them and Give Directions.

WROTE MANY NOTES OF ADVICE DURING TRIAL

Eight Sworn Documents to Show that Stanford White's Slayer Is Always Clear-headed—Thaw a Splendid Witness in a Civil Suit.

An amazing contribution to the record of the great Thaw case was made this afternoon when the lawyers and alienists for Harry Thaw handed to Clerk Carroll, of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, their counter-affidavits to the motion of the District Attorney for a commission in lunacy to pass upon the mental condition of Stanford White's slayer. The first of the affidavits, that of Senior Counsel Delmas, embodied a number of notes written by the prisoner to the lawyer during the recent progress of the trial.

Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw also made an affidavit in which she sharply and earnestly denied that there was hereditary insanity in the family.

Mr. Delmas's purpose in submitting the notes was primarily to show that Thaw had a logical perception of what was going on, and that he assisted frequently in the defense. But to the general public their great interest will lie in the fact that they throw a new and illuminating light upon the workings of the mind of the famous young prisoner, showing unexpected sides of his character, and that, moreover, they reveal certain phases of the case which have heretofore been buried out of sight.

Reading them one sees Harry Thaw first in the role of a zealous protector of his young wife, and then as a keen observer of the proceedings as they affect his own chances, now calling attention to some slip by the other side, now suggesting the advisability of calling some new witness forward.

The most significant of all the notes is one in which Harry Thaw advises Delmas to put Carroll Beckwith, the artist, upon the stand, and to prove by Beckwith that Evelyn Nesbit's innate goodness impressed him when he first knew her as a child model in Philadelphia, and that he only noticed a change in her after she had met Stanford White. In another note he urges Delmas to show to the jury that Stanford White went armed.

Delmas, Mr. Delmas, Attorney Gleason and McKee and Dr. Evans, Washington, and Stiles, mental experts, also furnish affidavits.

Although the quotations were not credited to Thaw the lawyers likewise incorporated into their affidavits numerous extracts from a personal statement which Thaw sent to them from his cell in the Tombs yesterday after working on it for two days.

Just after Thaw delivered the bulky document to A. Russell Peabody, of his counsel, he had a long conference in his cell with his wife. Both of them seemed confident and cheerful. Later his mother came to the prison to see him.

Our additional affidavits were filed by Mr. Harridge. These were the affidavits of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, mother of the prisoner; Clifford W. Harridge, A. Russell Peabody and Daniel J. O'Reilly, the remaining lawyers of the prisoner's last night. Of these, only the affidavit of Mrs. Thaw was of material importance, since the affidavits of the three lawyers were practically repetitions of the affidavits made by McKee and Gleason. Mrs. Thaw's affidavit, however, dealt at length with the story of hereditary insanity in her family, to which she gives an emphatic denial.

Mr. Harridge denied that there had been any split among Thaw's counsel. His explanation for the filing of the affidavits in two separate batches being that only a portion of them could be ready for the printer last night. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Thaw did not make her affidavit until this morning at 10 o'clock, when it was dictated to her at Harridge's office.

Tells Her Own Story. It is as follows:

"The move by the prosecution for an inquiry into the advisability of a lunacy commission for my son, Harry K. Thaw, affords me the long-desired opportunity of giving all the facts in relation to the alleged hereditary epilepsy and insanity, stripped of verbiage, which malicious misrepresentations and gross exaggerations have thrown around them."

"First, I wish to emphatically state that in the direct line of descent for four generations, if we include that of the defendant himself, there is no trace of either epilepsy or insanity. I shall speak of the collateral case later."

John Thaw, the paternal grandfather of Harry K. Thaw, who in 1858 established the first regularly organized banking house in the city of Pittsburgh, with which bank he was connected until his retirement from business, lived to be eighty-five years of age. He was a man of such determined will and force of character that up to a week before his death he would have been equal to any of the great financiers of his time, save for bodily infirmities.

All Inherited Strong Character. "William Thaw, the father of the defendant, was one of eleven children. Three sons and five daughters of this large family grew to manhood, and womanhood, some living to an advanced age, all inheriting a measure of the indomitable strength of character of their father. The youngest of this brilliant family of children at the age of seven years, developed a tendency to epileptic attacks, and these attacks continued at intervals until her death at the age of sixty."

"The children and grandchildren of Mrs. Thaw are absolutely free from any suggestion of epilepsy, thus proving her condition to have been the result of hereditary fever acting on the susceptible brain of a young child. This is the only case of known epilepsy or insanity in this line of the prisoner's family."

"The family records on both sides for two more generations back indicate nothing different from those I describe."

"I wish now to speak of the collateral cases of insanity in my own family. There were six brothers and three sisters in my father's family. A fifth son, Josiah, Jr., possessed a most brilliant mind and was an ardent student. His education at the close of his junior year at Amherst College was placed in his hands as a profound impression on the faculty as so profound that it decided not to limit him as to time, with the result that its close was immediately followed by an attack of his nervous system, which shattered for a time his nervous system."

"Two years later an attack of measles, always attended with perit in adults, was suppressed by a chill. The result was three days of acute mania, and on the advice of the attending physician he was placed in an insane asylum. After seven months he was pronounced cured and discharged. Two years later, at the time of the breaking out of the Civil War, he was teaching school in Illinois and joined the Twenty-third Illinois Regiment."

Had to Endure Insultations. "I beg to be pardoned for going thus into detail in giving the exact truth regarding the two solitary cases of derangement and pointing out the exciting cause in each. I do this for the reason that I have been obliged to endure for months with what fortitude I

Mrs. Thaw's Earnest Pleas and Parts of Her Son's Letters

EXTRACTS FROM THE AFFIDAVIT OF THAW'S MOTHER AND FROM LETTERS BY THAW TO HIS COUNSEL NOW REVEALED:

By MRS. THAW—First, I wish to emphatically state that in the direct line of descent for four generations, if we include that of the defendant himself, there is no trace either of epilepsy or insanity. "The move by the prosecution for an inquiry into the advisability of a lunacy commission for my son, Harry K. Thaw, affords me the long-desired opportunity of giving all the facts in relation to the alleged hereditary epilepsy and insanity, stripped of verbiage, which malicious misrepresentations and gross exaggerations have thrown around them."

By HARRY THAW—I have a respectable young married woman willing to come at once . . . and testify against S. W.

Evelyn told Hummel nothing of appendicitis or of anything else except geography. But White knew of appendicitis. He had paid the doctors.

I insist that my counsel produce Carroll Beckwith to testify regarding what he told me in the fall of 1903, in 1904, 1905 and 1906, concerning Mrs. H. K. Thaw's character and goodness in 1901 and the change that occurred in the fall of 1901 after the meeting of Mr. White.

KEEP RAILROADS OUT OF WALL ST. RYAN'S ADVICE.

Move the Tickers and Give Practical Men Control of Affairs.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Thomas F. Ryan, of New York, passed through Washington to-day en route to his country home at Oak Ridge, Va. Mr. Ryan did not call on President Roosevelt or any other Government official, although he spent a few hours at his residence here, where, Mr. Ryan is staying. He said he did not expect to see the President.

Discussing the railroad problem, he said:

"The railroads are really owned by the people, and not by Wall street brokers. They should be taken out of Wall street and the stock-quotations removed from the financial press. The railroads should be taken out of the hands of the stock speculators and the practical railroad men who are charged with the responsibility of operating the railroads should be in absolute control."

"One of the bad features of the situation is that every money center in the world is finding use for its capital in the promotion of home industries and in using every effort to prevent its money from going into speculation; and while I think we have money enough to take care of the legitimate business of the country, I do not believe, unless we can draw very largely from European money centers, that there is enough to carry on an active stock speculation in Wall street."

"I think it is the duty of money lenders to favor upon any undue speculative movement in any direction. They should husband their resources and be prepared to furnish legitimate business with the necessary capital and the money necessary to move the tremendous crops that we are likely to have this year."

RUSSIA'S FORMER HOLY SYNOD CHIEF DEAD.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 22.—M. Pobedonostoff, ex-Procurator General of the Holy Synod, died at 7 o'clock this evening.

Constantine Petrovitch Pobedonostoff steadily set his face against Parliamentary methods of administration, modern judicial administration, freedom of the press and secular education, with the result that at one time it is probable that there was no more in Russia more cordially detested by so many people as M. Pobedonostoff.

He practically received his political death blow when the Imperial Ukase was issued announcing freedom of religious opinion, which was made all the more bitter as it synchronized with the anniversary of his jubilee, occurring on the day of his death.

His resignation was announced Nov. 1, 1905.

STOCKS SLUMP AND PRICES NEAR THE PANIC LEVEL

Fear in Berlin and Weakness in London Give Bears a New Chance.

The stock market closed to-day at figures that were hovering close to the panic prices of ten days ago after two hours of trading that kept even the wisest operators guessing what was likely to happen next. After the first sudden collapse of prices an effort was made to restore order and recover some of the heavy losses, but it was not very fruitful.

Yesterday's violent break in the Erie and in Canadian Pacific paved the way to some extent for the action of the market to-day. The particular weakness, however, seemed to find its origin in foreign markets, there being a panic in Berlin and semi-demoralization in London, although the unsettlement abroad was in part reflected from the New York market.

The money situation seems to lie at the root of the foreign troubles. This advance in the Bank of France discount rate earlier in the week has aroused acute uneasiness over the coming April settlements which are of importance in all money markets.

In London also a stock market settlement begins on Monday. At that time discrepancy in prices of securities since the last settlement, two weeks ago, have to be made good. This was held to account for the particular weakness of Canadian Pacific, which holds an important place in the department of American securities on the London Stock Exchange.

That stock sold at 150 and 155 on the first sales here, compared with 103 1-2 on the last sales last night. This was on the marketing of 2,500 shares. Further offerings broke the price to 135, an interval of 1 1-2 points between sales being marked on the decline.

Union Pacific at the same time ran off 4 1-4 to 125. Reading and the Hill stocks fell from 3 to 3 1-2. Colorado Fuel and American Locomotive 2 1-4. DeWitt and Hudson 2 1-4. Amalgamated Copper and Anaconda 1 1-4, and practically all of the most active stocks from 1 to 2 points. Canadian Pacific rebounded 4 points immediately and there were other recoveries of 1 to 2 points on the rush the buyers made to cover and take profits. Liquidation was continued, however, and drove prices downward again and the tone was weak and fluctuations were wild.

On the Stock Exchange it was said that the early selling of Canadian Pacific was for account of a pool which had been operating extensively in this market and London. Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, the Hill stocks, Amalgamated Copper and United States Steel were all sold for London accounts.

The question, it was rumored, was the resources of the Canadian Pacific pool had been sold for London accounts. The question, it was rumored, was the resources of the Canadian Pacific pool had been sold for London accounts. The question, it was rumored, was the resources of the Canadian Pacific pool had been sold for London accounts.

The total sales of stocks to-day were $22,200,000 and of bonds $1,210,000.
